Most US dimes (and larger silver coins) dated before 1965 are made of 90% silver and 10% copper. First column shows the percent (of a troy ounce) of “pure” silver that could be extracted from this size uncirculated coin. Other columns show approximate melt value per coin when spot silver is at different prices. *- Above numbers are approximate and do not take into account minor coin wear or minting variances.

Other US coins containing silver:

US War Nickels 1942 to 1945 = 5.62% of ounce of pure silver per coin = .0562 x spot silver per coin

(War nickels containing silver have a large mintmark above the building on the reverse.)

1965 to 1970 US Kennedy (40%) Half Dollars = 14.79% of ounce of pure silver per coin = .1479 x spot silver per coin

Fractions of a cent were dropped when making most of these calculations. Above numbers do not take into account refining costs and do not include any possible collector premium, which some coins have. No guarantee is expressed or implied as to the accuracy of this information. This chart is intended to serve only as a guide. Do not make transactions based solely on this information. Caution – do not use a regular grocery store scale to weigh silver or precious metals. Precious metals are weighed in “troy” ounces, which is a different weight system.
